Miranda Zinn, a senior at Delaware Valley High School, goes out of her way to make an impact in the halls of DV. Zinn is this year's editor in chief of the school newspaper the Del.Aware. She is also the secretary of the Political Awareness Club and is a member of Junior Historians, Foreign Language Club, and National Honor Society. Zinn has also been on the high honor roll for the past four years. Zinn is also a volunteer for United Way's Day of Caring, Special Olympics, and the Senior Citizen's Dinner. "I want to be remembered as someone who was always willing to go out of my way to help others, regardless if they are strangers or close friends," Zinn said. She is unsure where she will be attending college, but she does know she wants to have a double-major in both education and psychology.

Delaware Valley field hockey player Katie Murphy is a standout student athlete. On the field, the senior midfielder has racked up three assists and one defensive save. Head coach Lindsay Sabo said, "Katie is the type of athlete you want on any sports team. She provides not only an offensive push, but we also assign her the opponent's leading scorer to defend each game. Just recently her amazing diving defensive save allowed us an opportunity to win a game in overtime." Off the field, Murphy is a member of National Honor Society, SADD, TATU, Peer Buddies, Student Council, and the Athletic Leadership Council. She has also been on the high honor roll since she was a freshman. She also plays varsity softball and basketball as well. "Being involved in school activities has helped me grow as a person and as a student," Murphy said. She has also volunteered for United Way's Day of Caring, Alex's Lemonade Stand, and Stars for Hope. She also helped organize and run a school supplies drive for the hurricane victims living in Joplin, Missouri. "I want to be remembered not only as an athlete but also as a student who made a difference," she said. Coach Sabo said, "Her heart, athleticism, skill and leadership shines on the field."
